Practical and business-focused

- In a world of mass legal service providers and anonymous corporate law firms, Brown Rudnick acts and thinks a little differently.
- With more than 250 lawyers and professional staff in the world's leading finance and technology centers, we offer clients the benefits of working with a global firm.
- We incentivize our partners to drive superior service through collaboration. And we focus on practice areas and industries where we are market leaders, so clients turn to us when the stakes are highest.
- Because in business and in the law, ingenuity wins.

During the 2023 GRC and Audit Conference, we look forward to providing thoughtful insights and valuable updates on economic sanctions and ESG, as well as the opportunity to learn from and meet colleagues facing similar challenges, renew acquaintances and exchange ideas. Please stop by and pick up an overview of our capabilities.

Brown Rudnick's White Collar Defense, Investigations & Compliance Group represents clients in all aspects and stages of white collar, corporate compliance, investigations, and enforcement matters.

Over the past several years, the use and enforcement of economic sanctions has grown, with sanctions regimes expanding and becoming increasingly more complex. Our team is well-positioned to both advise and address the economic sanctions issues our clients may face. Specifically, we regularly counsel our clients on:

- Investigating any actual or suspected violations or breaches of sanctions law;
- Making any necessary disclosures to the relevant authorities, and handling subsequent negotiations and resolution;
- Remedial actions to review and adjust compliance policies and procedures; and
- The interplay between various sanctions programs and the BIS's various import and export control lists.
